I want to be able to pass a string as a parameter to my sproc. At the moment I have; sp GetProjections @Projection_Type And the @Projection_Type variable would have something like "ProjectionType_Id" as the value. In my.aspx code I have; String myParam = "Projection_Id"; DropDownList1.DataSource = DBServer.GetProjections(myParam); DropDownList1.DataBind(); So in the codebehind I have; Public Shared Function GetProjections(ByVal Projection_Type As String) As DataTable DataTable dt = Nothing dt = DBServer.GetProjections(Projection_Type) Return dt End Function The issue is that when the code runs it says 'Incorrect syntax near the keyword 'parameter'.' I've tried to pass a string as an argument but it doesn't work. I understand that there is many ways to do this, but I would be grateful if anyone could tell me why this is wrong. Thanks, Luke. A: Try this: sp GetProjections @Projection_Type = "Projection_Id" @Html.IconImage("arrow", (object)@Model) @Model.GetLocalized()

What's New in the HP Recovery Manager?

HP Recovery Manager works to guarantee a safe environment for your computer, a PC made by HP or an HP laptop even. It can be safely installed by Windows 7 users to protect their data against disk corruption, hardware failure, accidental deletion or the regular usage of the PC. HP Recovery Manager is an important step to remove every potential problem from your computer environment as well as to provide a working backup of important information in case something goes wrong. HP Recovery Manager eliminates the possibility for your data to be permanently damaged by accidents and improper management of the PC. HP Recovery Manager can be successfully ran by any user even if Windows does not boot after a crash of all sorts, thus negating the need for a reinstallation of the operating system. Its effects are similar to the factory defaults in the case of a crash, but in HP Recovery Manager, it is much more comprehensive. HP Recovery Manager is the first step in fixing any PC, which had other tools downgraded in its process of self-recovery. Despite the fact that the application is included in every PC shipped with Windows 7, HP has to remind users that the application is not a guaranteed way to reformat a PC. On the other hand, if a clean installation of Windows is what you want, then HP Recovery Manager is what you want. This is a truly automatic and reliable solution to make your PC work again after an accident or any other PC mismanagement and the most convenient way to restore data after a disk corruption or a virus infection. You will be able to quickly apply the Windows installation included in your PC by yourself without the help of a specialist or a powerful computer. In the case of disk corruption, HP Recovery Manager makes it possible to restore your data and the OS without the need to order a recovery disc from HP, despite the fact you have not enough space on your hard disk drive. HP Recovery Manager is able to repair a system and restore its data even if the only thing that works is a previous version of Windows, for instance Windows XP or Vista. HP Recovery Manager comes with an automatic detection and repair system that guarantees that no data is missed from your PC and that your important data is backed up when an issue occurs. The program comes with auto-detection of critical data, all of which can be restored with it. This tool does not require you to specify the data you want to back up, the program will take care of that for you. HP Recovery Manager is not available in a Windows 7 retail disc. What is new
